

JUVENILE COURT OFFENSE REFERRALS

An offense referral is a record that a juvenile was arrested or cited and then referred to the prosecutor.

COURT OFFENSE REFERRALS BY RACE AND ETHNICITY

Juvenile court offense referrals are a way to track trends in juvenile crime. Juvenile court referrals are standardized throughout the state and can be retrieved from the JUVIS system, which is maintained by the state Office of the Administrator for the Courts, and from the King County record system. The two systems are not compatible.

A court referral is a listing of a juvenile's name and offense in the juvenile court's legal record keeping system. It is a record that the juvenile was arrested or cited for an offense by a law enforcement agency, and then referred to the prosecutor. A referral is not a conviction.

The number of juvenile court offense referrals is always greater than the number of arrests, because a referral may include other court procedures.

The total number of juvenile court offense referrals for 2003 was 58,084. This figure represents an increase of just over one percent over the 2002 figure of 57,352. From 1992 to 2002 the rate of juvenile court offense referrals decreased steadily, from 84,432 to 57,352 (a 32 percent decrease). From 1987 to 1992, the rate of juvenile court offense referrals increased steadily approximately three percent per year.

Of the 58,084 court offense referrals in 2003, 9,518 were from King County. This represents an increase of 25 percent over the 2002 figure of 7,606. However, from 1999 to 2002 Juvenile court offense referrals from King County decreased steadily by 35.8 percent (from 11,856 in 1999 to 7,606 in 2002).

Offense referrals are grouped according to severity. Type A+ and A are the most serious and include murder and rape; Type E is the least serious and includes reckless driving. Over three-quarters (75 percent) of offense referrals for 2003 were for Type D and E. Less than two percent of all referrals were for Type A+, A, or A -.

The racial/ethnic distribution of juvenile court offense referrals for 2003 showed that 66 percent were White, 10 percent were Black, three percent were Asian, eleven percent were Hispanic, and four percent were Native American. The ethnicity of five percent of juvenile court offense referrals were not reported or unknown. These figures have remained relatively unchanged since 1987.

JUVENILES REFERRED TO PROSECUTOR

In 2003, 44,458 cases were referred to the prosecutor for criminal

The county prosecutor is responsible for prosecuting juvenile cases. The prosecutor decides whether to divert a case, whether charges should be filed and which offenses should be charged. A juvenile may be involved in more than one case within a year depending on the number of times the juvenile offends. A case may involve more than one charge/offense depending on the circumstances of the event and the decision of the prosecutor.

Juveniles who commit minor/first offenses may be offered diversion instead of being taken to court. Juveniles who do not complete a diversion agreement, refuse diversion or are refused diversion are charged in juvenile court.

Changes in the method of tabulation of data for 1992 forward may account for differences in court case processing from previous years. The state Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) has reissued the data for 1994 due to a program coding error, in reports that reflect the gender and racial breakdowns for juveniles. Data for 1994 has been updated to more accurately depict current information.

Data reported below does not include King County. King County data is not comparable to AOC data.

In 2003, 44,458 cases were referred to the prosecutor for criminal offenses. Cases referred to diversion comprised 38 percent of the cases; charges were filed on 38 percent of the cases; and on 22 percent of the cases there was no action taken.

The rate of referrals to diversion was fairly constant from 1988 to 1992 in the range of 45 to 49 percent of those cases referred to the prosecutor. The rate decreased from 1993 to 1996 (from 42% to 37%), and remained relatively unchanged from 1997-2003 (38%).

The proportion of cases where charges were filed has increased from 29 percent in 1988 to 38 percent in 2003, an increase of 31 percent.

The proportion of cases for which no action was taken in 2003 was 22 percent. This figure has remained fairly constant from 1989 to 2003, ranging from 21 percent to 26 percent.

The courts remanded juveniles to adult court in less than one percent of the cases charged in 2003, relatively no change in the past seven years.

In 2003, seven percent of the juvenile cases were sentenced to the Juvenile Rehabilitation Administration (JRA). This figure continues a steady decrease from the 1994 figure of 13 percent. Ninety-three percent of the cases were sentenced to detention, probation, community service, community supervision, counseling, fines, restitution, or alternative disposition programs.

During 2003, 70 juvenile cases (less than one half of one percent of those juvenile cases referred to the prosecutor) were remanded to adult court. Counties where ten or more juvenile cases were remanded to adult court were Clark (12), and Spokane (24).

Of the juvenile cases referred to diversion, 80 percent completed diversion, two percent are in process, and 18 percent did not complete, refused or were refused diversion. Of those diversion cases where juveniles did not complete the diversion agreement, refused or were refused diversion, 24 percent resulted in charges being filed and cases referred to court.

Most cases that are adjudicated result in a conviction. Approximately 72 percent of the adjudicated cases resulted in a guilty finding. Less than one percent of the cases were found not guilty; and 28 percent of the cases were dismissed.

Sentencing within the standard range was the most common disposition. Ninety-seven percent of the juvenile cases adjudicated guilty were sentenced within the standard range. Two percent were sentenced outside the standard range (judge declared a manifest injustice [M.I.]). Of the cases sentenced outside the standard range, 87 percent of the cases were above the standard range and thirteen percent of the cases were below the standard range. The 2003 percentage of youth receiving a manifest injustice (2%) remains unchanged from 2002.

Gender

Males are referred to the prosecutor at a higher rate than females. Seventy percent of the juvenile cases referred to the prosecutor involved males. Ninety-six percent of the juvenile cases remanded to adult court involved males.

Cases involving females are referred to diversion at a higher rate than males. Forty-eight percent of cases involving females were referred to diversion as compared to 33 percent of cases that involved males.

Cases referred to the prosecutor that involved females were much less likely to be charged (29 percent for females, compared to 43 percent for males in 2003). From 1995 to 2003 there was a steady increase in the percent of cases involving females that resulted in charges being filed (from 22 percent to 29 percent.) There was no action on 22 percent of the cases for males and 21 percent for females.

RACE AND ETHNIC DISTRIBUTION

Reporting of race and ethnicity has increased since 1990. Consequently, the rate of increase in cases referred to the prosecutor, diversion, etc., by race or ethnicity may be overstated.

Of the cases where race or ethnicity was recorded in 2003, 68 percent of the cases referred to the prosecutor were White, seven percent were Black, four percent were Native American, thirteen percent were Hispanic, and two percent were Asian American.

Of the juvenile cases referred to diversion where race or ethnicity was recorded, 71 percent of the juveniles were White, six percent were Black, three percent were Native American, eleven percent were Hispanic, and two percent were Asian American.

Of the juvenile cases remanded to adult court where race was recorded 69 percent of the juveniles were White, 10 percent were Black, four percent were Native American, 17 percent were Hispanic, and less than one percent were Asian American.

In 2003, 11,935 juvenile cases were sentenced within the local standard range. Of those cases where race or ethnicity was recorded, 66 percent were White, eight percent were Black, five percent were Native American, 15 percent were Hispanic, and two percent were Asian American.

In 2003, 313 juvenile cases were sentenced outside the standard range (judge declared a manifest injustice or M.I.), an increase of 14 percent from 2002. Of those cases in 2003, 267 were sentenced outside the standard range to the Juvenile Rehabilitation Administration (JRA). Of the 267 juvenile cases sentenced, 69 percent were White, eight percent were Black, five percent were Native American, 17 percent were Hispanic, and eight percent were Asian American.

KING COUNTY JUVENILE COURT CASE RESULTS

Between 1995 and 2002
cases referred to the prosecutor decreased by 45 percent.*

Data on juveniles referred to King County Juvenile Court were provided by the King County Office of the Prosecuting Attorney. Data on gender and race/ethnicity are not available.

In 2002, 8,715 juveniles were referred to the prosecutor in King County. Of this number 2,970, (34 percent) were referred to diversion; charges were filed on 4,463 (51 percent); and there was no action on 1,253 (14 percent). During this time, 29 juveniles were remanded to adult court.

Between 1995 and 2002 cases referred to the prosecutor decreased by 45 percent, cases referred to diversion decreased by 48 percent, and cases remanded to adult court increased by 26 percent.

Of the juveniles referred to diversion in 2002, 70 percent completed diversion, and 40 percent did not complete, refused or were refused diversion (includes some carryover cases from the previous year). Ninety-two percent of those diversion cases where the juvenile did not complete the diversion agreement, refused, or was refused diversion resulted in charges being filed.

Of the juveniles adjudicated in 2002, 30 percent resulted in a guilty finding (found guilty or plead guilty), two percent were found not guilty; and 68 percent of the charges were dismissed.
